14 June 2010 — Wilmington, NC — Rice Law, PLLC a Wilmington-based firm has been named to Business Leader Media's 2010 list of Top 100 North Carolina Small Businesses.

The Top 100 list is comprised of companies with 100 employees or less that do the majority of their business in North Carolina. "Small businesses are a vital part of the economy in North Carolina," says Business Leader Publisher Bob Friedman, "They provide employment and the money they spend in-state creates a multiplier effect."

Rice Law provides quality, personalized legal counsel in the areas of family and education law. Rice Law attorneys focus on what's important to the client—family, assets, fairness, honesty, and respect. Rice Law provides full-service representation and unbundled online legal services throughout the State of North Carolina.

Business Leader selected the Top 100 small businesses based on their one-year and five-year growth rates and their significant business achievements and support for the local community in 2009.

"The mark of a true business leader is a firm that invests in its own future, its people and its community," says Friedman. "In the past year Rice Law hit the mark."

The ranking of the Top 100 small businesses will be announced on June 24th when all of the companies on the list are honored at awards events in Charlotte, Greensboro, and Raleigh.
